ABSTRACT

This pamphlet is a guide to locating specific data about working women in the various news releases, periodicals, bulletins, and reports published by the Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS). It shows where to obtain data on women's (1) labor force status, employment, and unemployment; (2) earnings and hours of work; (3) education; (4) membership in labor organizations; and (5) occupational injuries and illnesses. The pamphlet also explains how to obtain unpublished data from micro tapes, and how to obtain BLS publications. A list of BLS regional offices is included. (KC)

Preface

As part of its mission as the primary collector and distributor of data on working Americans, the Bureau of Labor Statistics publishes a wide array of data about working women. This information is presented to the public through a variety of publications, including news releases, periodicals, bulletins, and reports. The purpose of this pamphlet is to identify the particular publications in which specific data series may be found.

Information on how to obtain BLS publications appears on page 10.

The pamphlet was prepared by Beverly L. Johnson, under the direction of Elizabeth Waldman, in the Bureau's Office of Current Employment Analysis.

All material cited in this publication is in the public domain and may be reproduced without permission.

Labor Force Status, Employment, and Unemployment

The Bureau of Labor Statistics publishes a great variety of statistics on the labor force status, employment, and unemployment of women. BLS also prepares analytical articles and reports based on these statistics.

Most of the information comes from a monthly household interview survey—the Current Population Survey (CPS)—conducted for the BLS by the Bureau of the Census.

Some data on women by industry of employment come from a monthly survey of business establishments—the Current Employment Survey—conducted jointly by the BLS and State employment security agencies.

Earnings and Hours of Work

The BLS publishes data collected quarterly and annually from the Current Population Survey on earnings of women and their families; data on the hours they work are collected annually. The BLS also conducts surveys of wages by occupation in selected industries and areas, as well as occasional surveys of hourly earnings and weekly hours of all nonsupervisory employees in the private nonfarm economy. A listing of all occupational wage surveys conducted by the BLS is available in Directory of Occupational Wage Surveys, 1970-79, Report 606 (1980).

Occupational Injuries and Illnesses

Statistics on occupational injuries and illnesses of women are produced by the Bureau of Labor Statistics' Supplementary Data System (SDS). The information comes from reports submitted by employers to workers' compensation agencies of individual states participating in the system. Standard tabulations are produced by BLS for each participating State and made available to the public from the State agency or through the National Technical Information Service, which also can provide copies of State microdata files on tape. (Write to National Technical Information Service at 5285 Port Royal Road, Springfield, Virginia, 22151.) Analyses and publications of their own data are available from many of the participating States on an annual basis.

Characteristics of data	Where published	Frequency of publication	Most recent issue
Data include a description of the injury or illness; the age, industry, and occupation of the injured or ill worker; and, for some States, indemnity compensation and medical payments.	Available in microfiche or microdata files from the National Technical Information Service (see above). Also available in hard copy from individual States. ## Unpublished Data

Labor force statistics. The Bureau can generate special data on the labor force and other socioeconomic variables concerning women through use of the Current Population Survey's individual record (micro) tapes. These tape files contain records of the responses to the survey questionnaire for all households in the survey. Except for certain items, mostly pertaining to specific addresses and household identification, analysts can obtain and cross-classify a wide variety of information from these tapes on families, households, and persons. A library of CPS micro tapes is available for all months since January 1976; for the month of March since 1968; for May since 1973; and for various other months in years prior to 1976. BLS Report 507, BLS Data Bank Files and Statistical Routines, describes the contents of computer files available from the Bureau as of 1978. Inquiries regarding the micro tapes should be addressed to the Data Services Group, Office of Current Employment Analysis, Bureau of Labor Statistics, Washington, D.C. 20212.

Family expenditures. Tapes and unpublished tables can also be obtained for the Consumer Expenditure Survey containing data on expenditures by families maintained by women by size of family and age of women; and families where both husband and wife are earners. For information, write to the Division of Living Conditions Studies and Consumer Expenditure Analysis, Bureau of Labor Statistics, Washington, D.C. 20212.

Labor force participation. Listings of the civilian labor force by age, sex, and race for each year, 1980 to 1990. For information, write to Office of Economic Growth and Employment Projections, Bureau of Labor Statistics, Washington, D.C. 20212.
